Count Ordered to Return to His Wife

He Is Given Fourteen Days in Which to Comply With Court's Ruling.

[Special Cable to The Times-Dispatch.]

London, March 19.—A decision in the Countess of Cowley's suit for restitution of conjugal rights was rendered by President Evans, of the Divorce Court, to-day, in which the Earl Cowley is ordered to return to his wife within fourteen days. The countess charged that her husband left her and went to Paris last summer with a Mrs. Buxton, and had failed to return to his home. The countess wrote to her husband asking him to return for the sake of the child, and offering to start their married life afresh. The earl replied to this that their married life had been a failure, and refused to return. On the witness stand the countess said that their married life had been happy until the birth of their son in 1907.

It is understood that the countess will institute suit for divorce against the earl unless he obeys the court's order.

Lydia Robinson Tells of Her Journeying With Millionaire Childs.

New York, March 19.—Lydia Robinson, the young woman who claims to be the "my friend" who was with me in Spain," mentioned as a legatee for $15,000 in the will left by Irving W. Childs, the millionaire, who died recently, testified to-day in the Surrogate's Court that she and Childs traveled under so many different names that she could not remember them all.

She also told of having introduced the young spendthrift to her parents in Maryland as her husband. She also told of several attempts made to speak to Childs when he was living at the Hotel Rector, but was thwarted by Mrs. Childs, who refused to carry any message to her husband. She also told of many presents given to her by Childs. She said she would have to refresh her memory from her diary as to the places she stopped at while in Spain.

Department of Justice Will Push Proceedings Against Castro and Mylius.

Washington, March 19.—United States District Attorney Wise was instructed by the Department of Justice to-day to take the question of the right of citizenship of the former President of Venezuela, and Edward F. Mylius, the English journalist, to enter and remain in the United States as visitors to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in New York, on an appeal from the decision of the District Court, reversing former Secretary Nagel's orders of deportation. Castro was ordered excluded from the country because he refused to answer certain questions propounded by the immigration authorities, and Mylius because he had been convicted in London of libeling King George. At first the department intended to take the cases directly to the Supreme Court, but this plan was changed to-day.

Commission of House of Commons to Look Into Conditions in Peru.

London, March 19.—The House of Commons Commission announced to-day that the most searching inquiry would be made into the Putumayo rubber atrocities in Peru. The commission has set April 8 as the date for Arana, who was appointed by the Peruvian-American Rubber Company, whose agents are charged with torturing the native rubber gatherers. The high court directed that the affairs of the company be wound up and a full investigation made concerning its operations. Senator Arana was present and an attempt was made to protest against the dissolution of the company.

THEIR APPEARANCE STRIKINGLY SIMILAR

Levi P. Morton and Archduke Joseph Often Mistaken for Each Other.

BY LA MARQUESE DE FONTENAY.

L. EVI P. MORTON'S severe illness, which may have terminated fatally ere this appears in print, serves to recall the extraordinary resemblance which used to exist some ten or fifteen years ago between this former Vice-President of the United States and ex-ambassador in France, to the late Archduke Joseph of Austria, father of the Duchess of Orleans. The archduke used to be amused by the resemblance and frequently referred to the times when at French races he had been taken for Mr. Morton. On the whole, Mr. Morton was the better looking of the two, and he certainly had a better tailor. There was the same shrewd look in the eyes of both men, while in that of the archduke there was something that gave one the impression that he was afraid of being taken in. In both men, too, there was a pithiness of speech and a simplicity of manner. Thus, the archduke always referred to his consort as "my wife," and not as the Clementines, as he did.

Archduke Joseph's title of Palatine of Hungary or viceroy, was purely honorary, and had been shorn by the events of 1848 of all executive power. It, however, led the archduke to spend his existence in Hungary, except when traveling abroad. He usually wintered at Budapest, spent a few weeks on the Adriatic coast at Fiume, where he had considerable industrial interests, and the remainder of the time at Alcañiz, his magnificent place in Hungary. He was the man of business of the Hapsburg family, and greatly assisted his cousin, the Emperor, in the management of the colossal family fortune of the reigning house.

His wife, the Archduchess Clothilde, a singularly handsome woman, was a princess of the house of Saxe-Coburg, a granddaughter of King Louis Philippe of France, through her mother, the Duchess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, sister of King Ferdinand of Bulgaria.

Lord and Lady Limerick's only daughter, Lady Victoria Pery, who last summer joined young "Jack" Mitjans, son and heir of the Spanish Duke of Santona, and of the Duchess Dona Sol, sister of the Duke of Alba—a descendant therefore of King James II. and of Arabella Churchill—has now joined his successor in her affections, namely, the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, and he of Lord Annaly, Lady Victoria's engagement to him was formally announced late last autumn, and now she has broken it off. Being a very fascinating girl and extremely popular, she has the right to change her mind as often as she pleases. But still a maiden with two jiltings to her credit is apt to find men chary about making an offer to her of their heart, hand and their fortune.

Both of her ex-fiances were exceedingly desirable "parties" from a matrimonial point of view. For the Duke of Santona is very rich indeed, being the principal heir of all the colonial fortune of his multi-millionaire grandfather, the old Duke of Salama. The Duke of Santona did not inherit his grandfather's title, owing to the fact that his mother was a naturalized foreigner. The old duke had no issue by his legal spouse, a most disagreeable and unpopular woman. He left everything he possessed to his natural daughter.

The present Lord Annaly was formerly a Liberal, but seceded from that party in consequence of his objections to the financial schemes of Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd-George, and is the present Lord of the House of Commons. That is to say, the only one of the latter's lords in waiting who does not change with the administration. He rejoices in the nickname of "Slipper," was for many years master of the famous Pychley Hunt, has a bridge, is one of the few remaining poker players in smart society, objects to the automobile, and uses as his favorite conveyance an American buggy, which was preceded by a perfectly appointed dog-cart, and tandem; while before that he used to drive about London in one of those extremely smart but rather old-fashioned cabriolets, attended by a very diminutive "footman" standing on tiptoes on the footboard at the back and steadying himself on his insecure perch by means of a pair of straps, to which he was suspended most of the time.

Lady Victoria was a great beauty of the golden-haired, blue-eyed order, and was herself a great heiress. It is through her that Lord Annaly has become the owner of Holdenby House, in Northamptonshire, immortalized in Alice Neville's most popular novel "The Queen's Mary."

With regard to Lady Victoria Pery's parents, Lord and Lady Limerick, they are both very good looking. The earl was formerly in the army, but distinguished himself more as an amateur actor than as a soldier, his most notable performance having been his representation of "Romeo and Juliet," given at the Queen's Theatre at Dublin, on a very successful local tour. He has besides this one very peculiar hobby, that of boot-making and cobbling. Lady Limerick is possessed of great musical talents and a magnificent voice. Indeed, her singing and her skill on the violin served to secure to them as young girls the entrance into Dublin society. The two girls were the Misses Irwin, granddaughters of that J. B. Irwin, of Penn Hall, Roscommon, who in the early days of the nineteenth century was known throughout Ireland by the sobriquet of "Hard Riding Johnnie." It was their uncle Edward Irwin who was so conspicuous on the turf and whose high grand racehorse "Faugh-a-Ballagh," won the historic St. Leger in 1844.

The patronymic of the Lords of Limerick is Pery, which does not prevent their claiming descent on the distaff side from the Plantagenet Kings. The first Pery of note was William Pery, Bishop of Limerick, who was created Lord Glentworth in 1759. His son, for supporting the act of Union and for inducing the Corporation and County of Limerick to accept the same, was advanced to the rank of first viscount and then of Earl of Limerick. Conditions in New York Such as to Make Repetition Possible.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

New York, March 19.—Although two years have elapsed since the Asch building fire, in which 117 lives were lost, the committee on safety states in its report that conditions in New York factories are, for the most part, such as would make possible the recurrence of this tragedy. No more than a beginning has been made to remedy the dangerous conditions.

Investigation of 438 buildings showed the stairs to be unsafe in over one-half that number. In three-fourths of the buildings the emergency exits, outside of the main entrance, were unsafe. About 50 per cent of the doors which opened inward were obstructed, thus offering some obstacle to immediate egress. The emergency exits were even more generally obstructed.

Bills before the present session of the Legislature embody the minimum of requirements for fire protection in factories which the committee recommends as the result of its study of conditions in 2,365 factories in the city.

Mrs. Blake Is Elected. [Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

Fredericksburg, Va., March 19.—The City School Board, at a meeting last night, elected Mrs. W. N. Blake, of this city, as a teacher in the public schools for the coming year. The corps of teachers caused by the resignation of Miss Flora R. Mason.

T. Stokely Coleman, special commissioner in the case of Moore vs. Moore, held a public auction at Fairfax, in Spotsylvania County, 720 acres of land near that place, owned by the estate of the late Joseph Moore, to William Moore for $10,000 cash. The sale is subject to confirmation of the court.

ATTORNEYS REST FOR PROSECUTION

United States Steel Corporation Now Will Prepare Defense in Dissolution Suit.

New York, March 19.—The government attorneys in the dissolution suit against the United States Steel Corporation rested their case to-day with the introduction of evidence in support of the charge that the corporation has suppressed competition by means of interlocking directorates among the great railroads, industrial corporations and financial institutions of the country. The hearings were adjourned without date, and attorneys for the corporation will prepare their defense.

S. D. Simons, a statistician in the Department of Justice, presented tables showing the directorships in other corporations held by those who have been directors of the corporation or its constituent companies between the years 1898 and 1911.

Among them, George F. Baker, according to the tables, was, during the period, a director in eighty-seven corporations. J. P. Morgan, in seventy-eight. E. H. Harriman, in eleven. Charles Steele in fifty-two. B. C. Converse in sixty-five. Norman B. Ream in forty-two. C. M. Schwab in seventy-four. Daniel G. Reid in thirty. E. H. Gary in seventy-two. P. A. B. Widener in fifty-two. Robert Windsor in thirty-four, and the late H. H. Rogers in thirty-four.

The government, in its complaint, says in reference to interlocking directorates that "the power and control that
